

Some of the most prominent community organizations across Nashville and other cities are actively collaborating with TRIAD to increase access to programs and increase belonging for all community members by engaging in trainings, increasing accessibility, and updating employment practices for autistic people and people with other disabilities and their families.

This Neurodiverse Community Access Network (NeuroCAN) led by the Vanderbilt Kennedy Center provides:

- Community Contact and Resources Directory
- Research-based supports to increase accessibility for families
 - Sensory-Friendly Events
 - Staff and Volunteer trainings/workshops

For more information call (615) 875-4483 or email neurocan@vumc.org.

