

JOIN OUR STUDY!

Is your daughter or son with disabilities interested in finding paid employment?

Would you like guidance and support connecting them to a good job?

The Tennessee Employment Pathways Project is helping parents learn how to connect their family members with intellectual and developmental disabilities to paid employment.

What does it involve?

- Attend our “short course” focused on practical steps you can take to connect your family member to paid employment (5 sessions, 6 hours total)
- Receive check-ins from the project team every other month for a year
- Some—but not all—parents will also be matched with an informal mentor who helped their own family member find paid work

Parents will receive $250 for completing the “short course” and all project measures.

Date of IRB Approval: 01/24/2022

To participate, you must:

- Live in Middle Tennessee
- Have a family member with intellectual disability or autism who is interested in working and has already exited high school (or will graduate this spring)
- Be at least 18 years old

For more information, contact:

✉ emily.r.lanchak@vanderbilt.edu
📞 (615) 343-6405
🌐 www.employmentpathways.org

Principal Investigators: Erik Carter, Ph.D., Elise McMillan, J.D., and Julie Lounds Taylor, Ph.D. Graphic design support provided by the Vanderbilt Kennedy Center for Research on Human Development.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY
Institutional Review Board

VANDERBILT