 VANDERBILT KENNEDY CENTER

Who:

Study opportunity for children 12-36 months of age with autism or with concerns about their social interaction or language development.

What:

Families attend two study visits at Vanderbilt. Children receive developmental, communication, and autism assessments, and also participate in play sessions with their parent and watch a short movie.

Why:

Families receive feedback on their child's development including a written report with results, recommendations, and referrals at no cost. Families are compensated for their time and participation.
