

The Britt Henderson Training Series for Educators

Free professional development series about developing partnerships with families!

In this five session virtual series, you will learn about ways to partner with families of children with disabilities. Each session will focus on a different aspect of family-professional partnerships reflecting the dimensions of the Sunshine Framework: equity, trust, communication, commitment, respect, and advocacy. You will:

- hear directly from families of children with disabilities about their experiences partnering with educators;
- learn concrete strategies to partner with families; and
- participate in role-playing and case study activities to apply newfound strategies.

The series will include a research element. We will ask participants to complete short surveys to learn ways to improve the training.

Target audience: Special educators in Middle Tennessee. We also welcome school staff, parents, and community and family members.
